

TRYING TO FORGET

Bereaved of all, I went abroad,
No less bereaved to be
Upon a new Peninsula —
The grave preceded me,

Obtained my lodgings ere myself
And when I sought my bed,
The grave it was, reposed upon
The pillow for my head.

I waked, to find it first awake
I rose — it followed me;
I tried to drop it in the crowd,
To loose it in the sea,

In cups of artificial drowse
To sleep its shape away —
The grave was finished, but the spade
Remained in memory.
